Article

Wizz Air has introduced a new "all you can fly" subscription for €499 ($550) per year. This subscription lets customers book as many flights as they like, but there are some conditions. Passengers can only book flights within three days of departure and must pay around €10 per flight. The subscription does not include checked baggage or overhead luggage.

Reactions to this offer have been mixed. Some people like the idea, while others are unhappy with Wizz Air's service and past delays. Rory Boland from Which? Travel mentions that "travellers will see costs climb" when booking fees and luggage costs are added.

Wizz Air is trying to improve its reputation after being named the worst for UK flight delays. While some customers are excited about the new offer, others, like James Glenton, caution that "you might never take off."
