Article

A secondary school in Thailand is getting attention online for its unusual graduation ceremony. When students receive their graduation certificates, they are allowed to make funny poses instead of having a formal handshake with a teacher. Some students even prepare special poses with their friends.

The photos and videos have become popular on social media. Many people love seeing the students show their personalities and enjoy their special day. Graduation is an important moment in a student's life, but this school has found a way to make it even more memorable. Who says graduation has to be serious?
